

DELEGATE CORN: I'd like to make an amendment to that.

DELEGATE BALDWIN: It hasn't been seconded as yet. We're trying to find out whether there is a need for clarification.

DELEGATE SIMMONS: Second.

DELEGATE BALDWIN: It has been moved and properly seconded that II-B be adopted. Delegate Corn, you may present your amendment.

DELEGATE CORN: I'm not exactly sure of the wording, but the idea is that--let's say, for instance, under the legislative report there is a minority report. And among the six things in the minority report they want to amend section three. Okay, then, as soon as the committee chair says, "I move for the adoption of section three as amended and somebody seconds it," it is automatically the person who presented the minority report who may make the first chance to amend by reading their proposal.

DELEGATE BALDWIN: Yes.

DELEGATE CORN: I'd like you to put that in here. I am not sure exactly how to word it.

DELEGATE BALDWIN: We asked about clarification, and everyone understood that as such, just what you are saying.

DELEGATE CORN: That isn't what it says.

DELEGATE BALDWIN: It does say that. So, we aren't going to argue whether that--it states that. And you would deal with an amended proposal, the same as you would an amended motion. Naturally there must be something on the floor before you can attempt to amend.

DELEGATE CORN: No, no, the idea is that the substitute motion has the first opportunity for amendment as opposed to anybody else.

DELEGATE BALDWIN: The substitute proposal, you mean. There is a difference between a substitute proposal and a substitute motion.

DELEGATE CORN: The minority report proposed amendment would have the first right before anybody else in the body to propose the amendment. That isn't what it says here. And, therefore, I would make the amendment, a motion to amend: shall be made initially when the committee section is on the floor for adoption.

DELEGATE BALDWIN: I think it means just what it says and just what you're implying. And your motion to amend is in order. And if it gets a second, we'll put it on the floor.
